Andisyoda explores the past and presents home design! The beautiful thing about Minecraft is how you gradually improve as a player, honor your craft, slowly develop your skills – and your personal taste often follow suit. Small, dirty colors become beautiful villas, simple cobblestone replaced with forest trees or terakotta, and that pile of sand block you have sent onto the floor instead of building an actual bed. This is all to say there is a time in every life playing Minecraft there when they suddenly want to take home skills to build at the next level. Maybe it's time to try out a whole new design? One that incorporates a feeling of both style and luxury, I'm talking, of course, about building a taxi mansion entirely out of gold! Wait, that's not it. I actually talk about modern architecture! Two of the most popular building styles in Minecraft are modern architecture and contemporary architecture. The difference? Contemporary is the architecture of its time, using innovative approaches and minimalist design choices to make the home of tomorrow – today! Modern architecture on the other hand is – despite its name – quite old. With heavy-heavy creations such as Fallingwater or Villa Savoye, it dates back to the early 1920s. What unites the two styles is how good the terms fit into the game. The modern reason with contemporary homes seems to lend themselves to Minecraft probably stem from the fact that we build and block squares, says Andisyoda, a YouTuber professional with aspiring architecture, known for his skill with these genres. Many modern homes have a lot of straight-looking lines, a relative lack of diagonal lines and a strong horizontal composition. Just put blocks in simple range, add some strict windows carefully with a few vertical elements and you already have something that looks like a real home. When it's not featured in Minecraft.net article, Andy is busy making inspirations built on his channel, including the same in the modern architectural style. He initially started his Minecraft path by focusing on traditional castles, before moving on to modern and contemporary in 2014. With so much experience coming up over the years, Andy knows the theme by heart, what makes him look good and how to learn it. You can have fun looking at real buildings and taking inspiration from them, studying their floor-plans and even trying to recreate a real home of plans, photos and videos – this is the challenge! Andy can look at real house floor plans, pictures and videos, but he doesn't let himself become constrained by them – he always goes to script to his own design. Sometimes it will take inspiration from particular aspects of a home (like its layout or its façade), but this is just jumping the point for a modern home own design! Hey, remember the second paragraph where I made a HILARIOUS joke about building a home made of gold? good... turning out a gold roof might not even be locked in as too much and on the top as one of Andy's recent builds. I did this 20+ hour delivery, where I built my version of the beautiful Air Mansion 'The One'. I couldn't find any plans for it, so we had fun designing the most ridiculous houses possible, complete with boring lines, a YouTube recording room, movies, tennis courts and even a ellipid! While it was a fun builder, I always tried to make sure the layout was sensitive, the rooms had good views and the build would work for the rich who live in it! Luckily, you don't have to be stupidly rich to be able to build modern architecture in Minecraft! But getting started with a modern home might be easier than done. To play Creative Mode, a block is just a few mouse clicks away, but as a survival player, it might take hours for you to collect the necessary materials – and there is much need if you want to get it right! A modern good home builder will think about their palette, meaning what blocks will be used to build it, explains Andy. My best advice is block wood like concrete white, concrete gray lights, and stones – or similar – for the walls. White and grey work well together, especially if tied together with brown sticks. Man, I wish I had chosen Andy's Brain before starting on my own modern home... in both kwatzi!! Using concrete might not be the solid-solid advice, but that's because you have to apply water for it's hard. Sand, gravel, and all beautiful: these were the ingredients chosen to create the perfect concrete blocks! Finding necessary materials such as concrete requires you to lock in sand and gravel. In order to create concrete, you need to mix these two ingredients – including the color you want to disturb the block and – to create concrete powder blocks. Once you put the blocks, you have to expose them to iron water to solidify. However, according to Andy, these builds can incorporate any flow, depending on where they are. White supremacy builds can stand out nicely in a suburban environment, but if your build has plenty of flowering landscape around it you might want to reflect clum and choice your block. Choosing some natural looking materials will be more relying on the eye. For contemporary building very beautiful, nothing goes! I've seen home black, white, red, totally wooden and even cartoon brutal all-rock and they all look amazing. Use your imagination! I remember the last time I had to use my imagination. It was when one of my friends invited me to his Minecraft home. Oh, don't get me wrong, he looks amazing on the outside! But when we walked in, I saw the walls were made. Turning out 'beautiful on the inside' doesn't always apply to home design. I really hate 'ruins' at home! Andy tells me, a lot of my delight. I prefer furniture, open space and sleep design. I also like smart looking material that can be exposed to give an honest look at the home – in other words, you can appreciate the engineering and choice of material. Speaking of engineering, as the experienced building it is after all the houses it has done in the years, Andy knows exactly what kind of block he would like to see ads in Minecraft improving the quality of life in building projects: Vertical flags, glass layers and layers of grass and coarse dust. The main one in that list being unlock vertically – this would be amazing for the internal walls of a build as a full block is often too thick. Tip Pro #1: Bring lots of light to your build using backyard, light-wells, skylights and large windows. You can also use the building shape (U-shaped or L-shaped for example) to prevent too many areas away from windows. Andy's Pro Tip #2: Make an open plan layout – the most common room to have this is the cooking, the food room and the living room. Pro type #3: Make ceiling floors in ceiling windows most of the time, but also experiment with very narrow windows or even bars for privacy. Tip Pro #4: Avoid connecting textures, since it somehow looks weird in Minecraft! Building a modern house or contemporary in-game no small undertaking. It needs to have plenty of light, a decent amount of space, and many blocks of the right materials. One of the last built andy, Pheasants, consists of 2800 blocks of polished granite, 1500 smooth quartz blocks, 1300 light block gray concrete, as well as more than 500 glass panes. But that's not the only option if you ask Andy. A more modest two bedroom modern home I found on my server has 2000 snow blocks and 1500 forest planks as their main ingredients. 3500 blocks in total? I play survival! How will I collect them all? I guess I know what I'm going to do during the holidays. Going back to building dust goats suddenly doesn't sound so bad after all... This is by far my most profiled, inventive I've built so far! It's definitely towers above the rest of my modern castles that tend to be pretty simple. I've also noticed that it seems to mention Tony Stark's (which is kind of what I went for). This is my first time trying to use a vague style type like this one, I hope you enjoy it!
